Early Career Award

for engineering accomplishment

Jeremy T. Busby, Materials Science and Technology

For excellence in engineering materials research leading to timely identification of irradiation-induced segregation and phase instabilities in candidate structural refractory alloys for critical application to the DOE Space Reactor Program, and to development of high-performance cast stainless steels for critical application in ITER