

Initial Clinical Testing with a New Imaging Agent Holds Promise for Studying Brain Changes in Dementia

- Changes in brain function which occur in many diseases can be detected with radioactive agents
- A new radioactive imaging agent has been developed to monitor changes occurring in Alzheimer's Disease
- Initial patient studies have shown the promise of this new approach for further clinical evaluation

Imaging Cross Sections

30 hours
Post Injection